Christian Web Development Company, Urangatang.Com Rolls Out "FreeSites" Offer to Small Businesses, Houses of Worship and Non-profit Organizations

Ocean, New Jersey - Sept. 30, 2003 - Urangatang.Com, a global Christian web development company, is giving away free one-page websites to small businesses, churches and ministries. The "FreeSites" offer includes the cost of the site, the designer templates used to create it, and the cost of web hosting. There are no pop-ups or required advertisements on the sites, and no strings attached.

"God has blessed us in many ways, and we want to sow that blessing back into other organizations and into small businesses," explains Linda Norton, President of Urangatang.Com.

Urangatang.Com is a full-service Christian web development company, headquartered in New Jersey, with offices and consultants located around the world. The company manages all types of business websites -- religious and non-religious -- offering complete full-service solutions including site design, deployment, optimization for search engines and more.

Norton explains that recipients of the FreeSites offer can use their own domain name or the Urangatang.Com server as their web address. All free websites will feature an attractive scripture of the day and one 20K graphic that the recipient may upload. Currently, only websites written in English are included in the promotion.

The company is limiting the number of free websites according to their servers' capacity. Over the next several years, they expect to donate approximately one million free websites, distributed on a first-come, first-served basis.
